STADA: Teriparatide-Biosimilar Movymia[®] for treatment of osteoporosis launched in 24 countries

- STADA's Movymia[®] is a cost-effective alternative to Forsteo[®].
- The sales volume of the reference product was almost EUR 250 million in the last 12 months in Europe (IQVIA MAT/3/19).
- CEO Peter Goldschmidt: "The launch of Movymia[®] is another important expansion of our biosimilar portfolio in Europe."

Bad Vilbel, August 20, 2019 – On time for patent expiration of the reference product Forsteo[®], STADA is gradually launching the biosimilar Movymia[®] as a cost-effective alternative in 24 countries starting at the end of August. Forsteo[®] had a sales volume of almost EUR 250 million over the last 12 months in Europe. Teriparatide is approved for the treatment of osteoporosis and is the only active ingredient approved for osteoanabolic therapy.

"The launch of Movymia[®] is another important step in the expansion of our biosimilar portfolio in Europe. With this product, we offer patients a cost-effective alternative to the reference product with the same therapeutic safety and efficacy", explains STADA CEO Peter Goldschmidt the importance of the product launch for STADA.

Movymia[®] is injected using a re-fillable, multidose injection device called Movymia[®] Pen. The pen is used during the entire treatment period.

About biosimilars

A biosimilar is a pharmaceutical product manufactured by using biotechnology with a protein as active ingredient developed with the aim of being comparable to an existing biological pharmaceutical product (the "reference pharmaceutical product"). There are no significant differences in quality, safety and effectiveness between biosimilars and reference pharmaceutical products.
